Dog Days

We're in the stretch of slow summer days known as the dog days of summer. It's a time when hitting snooze three times more than usual is the norm, your second cup of coffee comes earlier in the day, and you might even feel the need to reach for a third.

Somewhere between lazy mornings and the summer heat lies Maryland's Mountains. A place that offers a relaxing change of pace, helping you shake off the sleepiness and trade humidity for cool mountain air. A place you can explore all morning by lake, by sky, or along scenic hiking trails, then spend the evenings dancing in the clouds. A place where summer feels more lively, more cool, and much more memorable.

WINTER CAN'T WAIT

Upgrades, Improvements, Transitions

We're firing up the CATs as winter plans come to fruition day after day. From a planned leadership transition and increased snowmaking capacity to infrastructure maximizing and lift maintenance, the mountain is alive with anticipation for the winter to come. Winter can't wait. Can you?
